So^th. Carolina THE GAZETTE.

MONDAY December 3, 1753.

PARIS, Auguſt 13.

THE clergy carry on the war againſt the law vigorouſly. A body of ſome thouſands have orders to march into Provence, to terrify the parliament of Aix.

A certain Duke is on the point of ſetting out for Rochelle, with his pockets full of lettres de cachet.

A commiſſion for deciding criminal cauſes is ſettling here, and it is thought our parliament will be ſent to Blois.

Rouen, Auguſt 11. Yeſterday morning while the chambers of the parliament were reading over the new remonſtrances they have reſolved to make to the king, M. de Fougeres paid them another viſit, with an arret of council, ordering the parliament to reſume their ordinary functions, threatening to eraze the laſt reſolution of the aſſembly, if they did not immediately obey. M. de Fougeres being withdrawn, they deliberated on the matter; the firſt preſident, and twelve or thirteen members were for reſuming their functions immediately; but eighty voted, that they would go thro' with their remonſtrances, and mind private buſineſs too.

Paris, Auguſt 25. One of the counſellors in the parliament of Rouen is highly commended for ſaying in that aſſembly, "It is time for us to go with our law books in our hands to the frontiers, to defend them in caſe of danger, ſince the ſoldiers, who'e proper buſineſs it is, have been ordered to take poſſeſſion of the courts of juſtice." Things are ſtill in the ſame indeciſive ſtate, and ſo they are like to continue. We ſtill talk of great changes in the miniſtry.

London, Sept. 1. We learn from Straſburgh, that the camp which has been ſo long talked of, is now actually marking out between that city and Schleſtod; that it is to conſiſt of ſixteen thouſand foot, and eight thouſand horſe; that the troops are to take the field by the 15 h of September, and are to be commanded by the Marſhal Duke de Belleiſle

The rains which have lately fallen in Spain, have not reſtored the country to its uſual fertility: Miſery and diſtreſs, thro' ſcarcity of proviſions, prevail in many parts of the kingdom; and even in Madrid, the neceſſaries of life are double their ordinary value.—— It is ſaid that the men of war, deſtined to reinforce the Spaniſh guards coſtas in the Weſt-Indies, will be ready to put to ſea in a fortnight at fartheſt.

We are well informed that the parliament will ſit for the diſpatch of buſineſs the 20th of November next, and be diſſolved very early in the ſpring, there being ſome things neceſſary to be done before its diſſolution.

Sept. 3. It is ſaid that the governor of a certain Iſland in the Weſt-Indies is ſo far diſpleaſed at ſome late orders given, that it is thought he will reſign the ſame.

Sept. 4. By letters from Edinburgh we have advice, that a few days ſince were brought in there from Fort Auguſtus, by a captain's command of lord Geo:ge Beauclerc's regiment, Archibald Macdonald, of Barriſdale, John Macdonald younger of Morar, Ronald Macdonald, captain of Barriſdale's guards, and four others, that were apprehended with them in a wood, on the ſide of Loch-hoorn, in Moidart, upon the 18th of July laſt, and committed cloſe priſoners to the Caſtle.

It muſt afford the greateſt ſatisfaction to every body to obſerve the ſucceſs our Greenland ſhips have had this year; and though a great many were employ'd, not one of them loſt. A few years ſince there was not a ſingle ſhip from Britain employed upon that fiſhing, notwithſtanding they were in a manner the firſt diſcoverers of the place, and the advantages of it. It is true, the whole trade was once carried on by an excluſive company in England for a conſiderable time, but they were beat out of it by the Dutch, and have continued ſo till the late act of parliament was paſſed for reviving it, the happy effects of which are very viſible. During eighty years, in which the Dutch were unrivalled in this branch of commerce, they cleared upwards of eight millions ſterling, not to mention the innumerable other advantages accuring from it. Since we have again come in for a ſhare in this trade, to render it more beneficial, it is the opinion of ſeveral judicious perſons that a fort ſhould be erected, and a port opened in the Orkneys, where we might have all kinds of neceſſary utenſils always ready; there we could make more and better oil, from the ſame quantity of fiſh, than any of our neighbours; it would alſo give us an opportunity of viſiting the coaſt of Greenland earlier, and remaining there later than other people.

Sept. 8. We hear ſeveral rich and wealthy Jews are determined to petition the houſe of commons for the repeal of the late naturalization act, finding it ſo generally diſagreeable to the Engliſh nation, that their future quiet reſidence among us, depends on their being in the ſame ſtate they were in before the glorious act of 1753.

Extract of a Letter from Fort St. David, by the Admiral Vernon, dated Feb. 28. 1753.

"Our troubles ſtill ſubſiſt, and in my opinion muſt continue, unleſs they are accommodated by our ſuperiors at home, or Mr. Dupleix (whoſe inhumanity is not to be paralleled) is diſplaced. At the time of governor Starke's arrival here from Madraſs, which was in July laſt, our nabob's affairs where in a very indifferent ſituation: He had juſt before engaged his enemies, and been obliged to retreat, which gave them great ſpirits, and cauſed his own ſubjects to revolt The French were ſo elated at this little ſucceſs, that they marched up cloſe to our bounds with their whole ſtrength, which was far greater than ours; however on their approach, governor Starke (who ſucceeded our late deputy governor, Mr. Docknell, deceaſed) ordered our army in conjunction with the nabob's, which was encamped at Trivady (a fort about ſixteen miles diſtant) to march this way, which they did with the greateſt expedition, and encamped within two miles of the French. Luckily at this juncture, Major Lawrence arrived from Madraſs, and took upon him the command, which the French were no ſooner apprized of, but they returned to their own bounds: The nabob and our forces purſued them in hopes of bringing on a general engagement, but finding it to no purpoſe, we made a feint of retreating haſtily to our former encampment, in hopes of bringing them after us, in which we happily ſucceeded; for as ſoon as governor Starke was informed of their return, he poſted away immediately to the camp, in order to hold a conference with the nabob and Major Lawrence; the reſult of which was, to attack them early the next morning, which we accordingly did, and thereby gained ſo compleat a victory as to take all their guns, tents, baggage, &c. Their commander in chief was mortally wounded and all their other officers, and the major part of their ſoldiers either kill'd or taken priſoners. After this and our former ſucceſs, there was reaſon, I think, to hope that M. Dupliex would be inclined to liſten to the nabob's propoſals for peace, which was to put every thing on the coaſt upon the ſame footing it was before the commencement of the troubles; but inſtead of ſo doing, he arrogantly anſwer'd, that when the nabob had returned all the French priſoners, he would then begin to think of peace. Another of his unaccountable actions, done purely, I ſuppoſe to affront the Engliſh nation, and which can't but ſurprize you pretty much, was this: The preſident and council of Madraſs having thought proper to order a detachment, conſiſting of 90 men to be ſent by ſea to this gariſon, they proceeded accordingly; but when the boats were abreaſt of Pondicherry, M. Dupliex ordered a French European ſhip, well manned, to ſeize and bring them in thither, which when done, he wrote to the governor of Madraſs, that he did not detain our men as priſoners, but hoſtages, for the delivery of his ſeveral men that had been made priſoners by our nabob. Nor did his revenge end here; it being certain that a general of the Mogul's, Gawzadecawn by name, who was coming with an army to our nabob's aſſiſtance, has been lately poiſoned by means of the French. However, at preſent we are on both ſides in a ſtate of inactivity, each expecting ſuccours from the Northern parts of this country; and what events they may produce I ſhall inform you in my next.

"I forgot to acquaint you, that two or three days after our laſt ſucceſs, the nabob did governor Starke the honor to return his viſit, when he acknowledged himſelf not a little indebted to him for the happy effects of the wholeſome advice he had given him."

Sept. 11. Notwithſtanding the number of whales caught this year by our Greenland ſhips hath been ſo large, all the oil, excepting a very trifling quantity, has been contracted for, and bought up for exportation; and has been, and now is, ſhipping off, as faſt as the blubber is boil'd. This is a plain indication of the importance of this branch of trade to Great-Britain; and how highly it deſerves the encouragement that has been given to it by the legiſlature, as it enables our merchants not only to employ a great number of our poor mechanicks as well well as ſeamen, but likewiſe contributes greatly to the increaſe of our navigation.

Sept. 12. By a private letter from Paris, we are informed, that the court of Verſailles is ſo irritated at the proceedings and behaviour of the parliament of Rouen, that 'tis thought ſome of them will be ſent to the Baſtile.

Letters from Madrid, adviſe, that bread continues to be at an exceſſive price, and ſome bakers have been detected in mingling aſhes with their flour, for which it is thought they will be juſtly and ſeverely puniſhed.

Two Sloops of War are fitting out in order to be ſtation'd at South Carolina.

Yeſterday was held a board of admiralty, when their lordſhips were pleaſed to put two ſhips of twenty guns into commiſſion, and order'd them to be fitted out for the coaſt of Africa.

Several eminent divines, we hear, have lately with great elocution and ſtrength of argument, endeavoured from the pulpit, to appeaſe the popular clamour againſt the naturalization of the Jews, by ſhewing it to be a judicious ſtep taken by the miniſtry, in a religious as well as a political view.

Sept. 15. We hear that 1000 men will be ſent to the Eaſt-Indies to protect the trade.

CHARLES-TOWN, December 3.

By the laſt Veſſels from Providence, we have Advice, that the French not only continue to keep ſome arm'd Veſſels cruizing in the Windward Paſſage, about Hanteaga, Maguana, the Caicos, Crooked and Turk's Iſland, &c. but that they have alſo lately landed Cattle on moſt of them, till'd and planted ſome of the Soil, and ſet up large Croſſes on each, with Inſcriptions of the pretended Property. Some of the Engliſh Veſſels that have been taken on the Coaſts of theſe Iſlands and condemned at Cape Françoiſ, have been releaſed by the French General on Hiſpaniola, who gave them certain Paſſes for 20 Days, with ſtrict Cautions againſt being found there again. 'Tis not unlikely, that this Affair will become ſuch another Subject of Diſpute, as the Neutral Iſlands Tobago, &c. for, we hear, a Complaint has been made by the Britiſh Miniſtry upon this Occaſion, to the French Court, and that it diſowns having giving any Directions for taking Poſſeſſion of or ſettling any Iſlands in the Windward Paſſage to which the Engliſh have any Claim.
